Solid steel construction is the basis for the Model 1000 and 1380.

Two tough steel skins surround the CFC-free polystyrene insulation. In addition, a thermal break creates a barrier to keep heat and cold from transferring through the door. Each model features heavy-duty hardware for smooth operation.

The outer steel skin of the Model 1000 is made from 24-gauge steel, while the Model 1380 uses 27-gauge steel. The interior skins of both models utilize 27-gauge steel. The interior and exterior faces of the door feature stucco embossing and the exterior has shallow ribs. Our 4-step insulation system features insulation, weather-stripping, thermal break, and tongue and groove construction for a snug fit between sections. The Model 1000 and 1380 are both available pre-painted in White.
